

Associate Director of Strategic Communications, University of Washington

As a UW employee, you have a unique opportunity to change lives on our campuses, in our state and around the world. UW employees offer their boundless energy, creative problem solving skills and dedication to build stronger minds and a healthier world.

UW faculty and staff also enjoy outstanding benefits, professional growth opportunities and unique resources in an environment noted for diversity, intellectual excitement, artistic pursuits and natural beauty.

UW Advancement has an outstanding opportunity for an Associate Director of Strategic Communications.

The Associate Director of Strategic Communications develops, coordinates and executes strategic communications and public affairs efforts, strategies and plans designed to promote specific University of Washington initiatives, as well as the overall value and importance of the UW to students, our state and society as a whole.

As part of University Marketing & Communications, the Associate Director of Strategic Communications must be an expert communicator, familiar with new and emerging communications tools and the state's public affairs landscape. They must possess an understanding of how to create messages and strategies that best utilize those tools to advance UMAC and University goals. A vital part of the role is building partnerships with University and unit leaders, communicators and subject matter experts in order to work in a collaborative manner to support unit and University goals. They should also be extremely well organized, exhibit exceptional attention to detail and be able to troubleshoot and multitask.
